This talk discusses the Maṭṭaiyaṭi Utsavam (Quarrel Drama) that is celebrated in the month of Mārkaḷi (December-January) at several Viṣṇu temples in the Tirunelveli area of Tamil Nadu. This drama, which unfolds on the penultimate day of the twenty-one day Festival of Recitation, enacts a quarrel between Viṣṇu and his consorts. Over the course of this extended two-day drama, Viṣṇu initiates a recalcitrant devotee, goes in search of a lost jewel, is locked out of his temple home by his angry wives, and eventually is reconciled with them through the timely intervention of this same devotee. In this illustrated talk, I explore the theme of order and disorder by examining the Maṭṭaiyaṭi Festival at the Vāṇamāmalai Perumāl Temple, Nanguneri, along two intersecting vectors: the first tracing the ways in which the drama reorders time and rearranges narrative, while the second follows the unpredictable trajectory of capricious love and transformative grace.
