The Holocaust in Hungary in Comparative Perspectives

Talk by Dr. Gabor Kadar
Central European University

Between mid-May and early July 1944, in merely eight weeks, Hungarian and German Nazis deported 437,402 Hungarian Jews – 97 percent of them to Auschwitz-Birkenau. A comparison with other areas in Europe reveals that the Nazis deported more people from Hungary in a span of barely two months than from occupied Western and Northern Europe, the Balkans and the allied states in three years altogether. What was the role of the Hungarian state in one of the most effective deportation campaigns of the Holocaust? The lecture will attempt to answer this question by “zooming out” and embedding the Hungarian story into the wider European picture.

Respondents:

Dr. Attila Novák, senior researcher at the Goldziher Institute, Budapest, Hungary, and the National University of Public Service, Budapest, Hungary.

Dr. Balázs Berkovits, researcher at the Stephen Roth Institute, Tel Aviv University, and the Bucerius Institute, University of Haifa.

The event will take place on Zoom, on December 12, 2021, 18:00. Register here.
